A Dutiful Citizen

HERE'S A MAN in our midst who prides himself greatly upon the exactness with which he regulates all his duties, both in business and in social life. One evening recently he went to the Empress to dine with a business acquaintance.

¶ "Don't wait up for me," he said to his better half, "I may be rather late but business is business you know, and it can't be helped."

¶ The next morning the man of method was far from looking or feeling well. At breakfast he sat toying listlessly with his dry toast and butter while his wife sat stonily silent behind the coffee-pot.

¶ The clock in the room was equally silent.

¶ "Ellen, my dear, there must be something wrong with that clock. I'm sure I wound it up last night."

¶ "No!" answered his wife, "You turned on the graphophone and it played 'Take Me Out for a Joy Ride,' you stuck your latch-key into the hall clock and screwed your corkscrew into the keyhole of the hall door."

MORAL: Don't mix drinks or you mix up yourself. Whether at the "Empress" or anywhere else, it's a good thing to attach yourself to G. H. Mumm & Co's "Extra Dry." The bottle with the rose-colored capsule has no bad after effects.
